

Forbes

Oct 28, 2021 By Jill Barth

La Valentina Pecorino Colline Pescarese IGT 2019 ($18)

Beautiful Abruzzo, between mountains and sea, is commonly associated with Montepulciano and Trebbiano, but another white grape — Pecorino — is making its way back on the scene. Some would say it's been rediscovered, as it was so unfavored over the years that it was nearly pushed to extinction. Interesting examples are beginning to make their way into the U.S. market, such as this complex version from La Valentina, a producer that doesn't use any international varieties, relying instead on Italian cultivars. Pair with grilled seafood and shellfish dishes.

LA VALENTINA ^{FROM} 30 _{YEARS}

